Title notes

Conditions governing use

Records include materials that are protected by copyright. Copyright ownership varies. Generally, SFU is the copyright owner of materials authored by SFU employees, but copyright in materials authored by third parties typically remains with the third party.

SFU-owned materials - SFU makes its own protected materials available under Creative Commons License CC BY (Attribution). For license details, see <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>. Any other use of copies requires the permission of SFU Archives.

Third-party owned materials - researchers may request copies or download copies (when available online) for purposes of private study, research, or other use permitted under fair dealing as set out in the Canada Copyright Act. Use of copies for any other purpose may require the copyright owner's permission.

Item-level descriptions may provide more detail. Consult the Reference Archivist for more information relating to determination of copyright ownership, term of protection, and how to contact copyright owners for permissions.

Series F-241-6: "On the Hill": audio visual recordings

Date: 1994 - 2000, predominant 1994 - 1995 (date of creation)

Scope and content:

Series consists of an incomplete run of productions for "On the Hill," an SFU student-produced broadcast programme based in the School of Communication course CMNS 326 "Applied Media Workshop: On the Hill."

"On the Hill" was created in the early 1990s by School of Communication student Valerie McTavish. At the time, videotape and audio were increasingly being handled directly by students, and the School had developed a non-broadcast course in response. McTavish was a student in the course. She felt there was a lack of community spirit on the campus and saw a monthly, student-produced television programme as a way to encourage involvement and feature campus stories. She acted as producer, and the programme aired on Rogers Cable. After McTavish graduated, Communication students continued her work. The School saw the educational value of the programme and soon added it to its curriculum. "On the Hill" remains a part of the School of Communication, and is the focus of the course CMNS 326 "Applied Media Workshop: On the Hill." The programme continues to be a student-produced broadcast news program with content geared to SFU's student community.
