His diverse ethnic makeup figures significantly in his writings. In 1962, Wah married Pauline Butling, a teacher, writer, and literary critic. Wah studied Music and English at the University of British Columbia (BA 1963), did some graduate work in English Literature at the University of New Mexico from 1963-1964, and completed an MA in English at the State University of New York Buffalo in 1967.

Wah is primarily known as a poet and has published numerous books of poetry, including "Lardeau" (1965), "Breathin' My Name with a Sigh" (1981); "Waiting for Saskatchewan" (1985), winner of the Governor-General's Award for Poetry, "Music at the Heart of Thinking" (1987); "Alley Alley Homefree" (1992); and "is a door" (2009), winner of the Dorothy Livesay Prize for Poetry. He is the author of the bio-fiction "Diamond Grill" (1996), winner of the Howard O'Hagan prize for short fiction. He has also written many works of nonfiction. His collection of critical essays "Faking it: Poetics and Hybridity" (2000), winner of the Gabrielle Roy Prize for Criticism, represents fifteen years of his writings in various forms.

Wah has worked as an instructor of English composition and literature at various academic institutions. From 1967-1989, he taught writing at Selkirk College in Castlegar, British Columbia, while living in South Slocan. He also taught at David Thompson University Centre in Nelson, British Columbia, until the school's closing in 1984. When the David Thompson University Centre closed in 1984, Wah was involved in establishing the Kootenay School of Writing in its place, and from 1995-1999, Wah served as an electronic writing advisor for the Kootenay School of Art. In 1989, he was appointed professor of English at the University of Calgary, a position he held until 2003, when he retired and became professor emeritus. He taught courses in English composition and literature. In 1995, Wah taught a graduate seminar on bpNichol's "The Martyrology" at the University of Calgary in conjunction with Roy Miki, who taught a section of the same seminar at Simon Fraser University.

Wah has also worked extensively as an editor, both for literary periodicals, and as editor for the poetry manuscripts of friends, colleagues, and peers. While at the University of British Columbia, he was a founding editor and contributor to the poetry newsletter "TISH," and served as Associate Editor from 1961 to 1963. Well known for his work on literary journals and small-press, Wah has been a contributing editor to the journal "Open Letter" since its beginning in 1970, involved in the editing of "West Coast Line," and, along with Frank Davey, he co-edited the world's first online literary magazine, SwiftCurrent in 1986. From 1992-1993, he was part of the editorial collective of "Appropriate Voice," the newsletter for the Racial Minorities Committee of the Writers' Union of Canada, and also worked to organize a conference of the same name held in May 1992 in Orillia, Ontario. From 2003 to 2008 Wah served as poetry editor for "The Literary Review of Canada."
